

The West Virginia Developmental Disabilities Council announces 1-day introductory workshops on the importance of valued social roles for people with developmental disabilities.

This workshop is designed to give an overview of the theory of social role valorization and its implications for helping individuals attain valued social roles, along with the role service workers and others may play in the devaluation of people with developmental disabilities.

The main presenter will be Jo Massarelli, the Director of the Social Role Valorization Implementation Project.

The workshop will be offered in three locations across the State. The training is FREE; lunch will be provided. A total of 6 social work CEUs have been requested.
